CHAIRMAN ELBA INDUSTRIAL BOARD

MORE COMPANIES BUILD PLANTS IN RURAL AREAS AS COST CUTTING MOVE

Big corporations, also small ones, once built their plants mainly in big manufacturing centers such as Chicago, and Detroit, close to suppliers, customers and big labor pool. In recent years many have turned to the out-of-the-way towns and from all indications the number is expanding.

In the next decade it will be a rare exception when a manufacturer decides to build a factory in a big city area, says Leonard D. Vaseen, a senior partner of Fantus Company in New York City, which is one of the largest firms among the staff reporter of the Wall Street Journal. Vaseen stated that last year 8 out of 10 new factory sites were well away from large urban areas. A decade ago only 50% of new factories went to rural areas where they are finding lower operating cost. Industry finds cheaper land, labor, taxes, a ideal climate, purer air in the less congested areas. They find the small towns with warm, friendly, cooperative people, also city, town and county government the same. The cost of preparing factory sites is much less. Big giants like General Electric, Ford Motor Company, along with many others, are favoring the small towns. In 1954 only 35% of the 268,615 factories were located in small towns. Today, 50% of these factories are in rural areas. In New York City there are only 19 factories that employ as many as 1,000 people. 20 years ago 42 factories were in New York City.

THE LEGION OF LOST SOULS is what we were initiated into on Monday morning when we left our only little girl at the schoolhouse. For surely there is no more lost or useless feeling than that experienced by a mother who has deposited her precious child into another's care and gone home to a house whose emptiness screams at her. For the frightened parent realizes that this step is the beginning of a series of short separations that culminate in total separation.

School Revenues Rise, Extra Millions Seen By Revenue Officials

State revenues that help pay for public education in Alabama have far surpassed the anticipated collections for the first 11 months of the state's fiscal year.

In fact, State Revenue Commissioner Guy Sparks expects schools to receive as much as $2.5 million in excess of their appropriation this year.

This marks the first time in six years that the Special Education Trust Fund appropriations will be met in full. Every year since 1954-55 it has been necessary to prorate school funds.

"Without any taxes being added or raised, collections this year are due to better business conditions and a sound, expanding economy."

During the first 11 months of this fiscal year, which ended September 30, the State Revenue Department has made gross school tax collections totaling $149 million. Deducting such items as debt service, this leaves net collections of $123.7 million. For this fiscal year, the State Legislature appropriated $137.9 million for public education, with the provision that schools might receive up to $7.5 million more if the appropriation was exceeded. Thus, September net collections of more than $142 million are necessary if the appropriation is to be exceeded.

Special Education Trust Fund revenues have increased from $115.9 million in 1958-59.

"This increase in school funds has resulted in a marked improvement in the quality of public education," Gov. Patterson said. "I believe we have seen the dawning of a new day for the public schools of our state."

We were so interested to learn that Lorene and Sam had attended the Reverend Billy Graham's service in Huntsville several Sundays ago. They were visiting Mary and Perino Galtner, former Elbians, and their daughter in Talladega and drove over to the missile base for the afternoon. Lorene told us that the crowd was too large to count but that during the sermon there was not a sound heard. Like us, she felt the music was a sermon in itself. This is an event we shall always regret missing.

THROUGH THE KEYHOLE

BY MRS. ROBERT CANNON

THE NICEST THING about town life is that a trip to any store becomes a social event as one is bound to see many friends. So it was with us last Monday when we saw Lorene Sawyer in the grocery store. From her we learned that Lela Ann and Marilyn Dyess are setting up house keeping in Huntsville now that Martin is no longer with Uncle Sam's Army.

We were so interested to learn that Lorene and Sam had attended the Reverend Billy Graham's service in Huntsville several Sundays ago. They were visiting Mary and Perino Galtner, former Elbians, and their daughter in Talladega and drove over to the missile base for the afternoon. Lorene told us that the crowd was too large to count but that during the sermon there was not a sound heard. Like us, she felt the music was a sermon in itself. This is an event we shall always regret missing.

GOING HOME from the tea we recalled seeing Laura Barker among the guests. And this caused us to remember a most pleasant evening spent on her spacious front porch many months ago when we just stopped by and when asked to stay, we did. To sit in a comfortable rocker on a cool porch listening to the sounds of evening as day turns to night, to hear happy childish voices calling from the yard, to be in the company of neighbors - these are the things we can take with us if difficult but interesting.

THE BOILING POINT was just about reached as we drove over to New Brockton last Wednesday for a high noon meeting of the University of Alabama Alumni Association. The sun's rays danced along the road before us and the insolent breeze moved only hot air. Even the leaves on the trees drooped, and we wondered how we ever left Ben Brock end in Columbia where they were guests of Ellie's sister, in the cool last.

But the spirits of the small group gathered at the school were not at all high. All was enthusiasm and "Roll Tide" Coffee County Alumni Association President E. C. Newell, Jr. and I were the only ones to see Bill Hembee of Union Springs whom we last saw at the Chi Omega house on the Bama campus when he was courting "Doodles" Rawlson. Now Mrs. Hembee, a complimentary Bill on his champion field dog that won the National Field Trials last year and he gave us an exciting account of this event which takes place annually in Union Springs. The last trial drew people from forty states and four foreign countries, and was more exciting than Mardi Gras, according to Bill!

Proud to the arrival of the others, Mr. Nevins and I had time for a most interesting conversation, during which I complimented him on the recent television appearance of Kinan's, the vocational agriculture teacher. (It was then that we first learned of the marvelous trips cross-country taken each summer by that Vocational Agriculture group.)

We reminisced about the University and, as always when two Bama grads remember, we spoke of Dr. Denny, Dr. McClure, Dr. Rose, the sad destruction of the white sorority houses that created a little bit of New England in the heart of the southland, and the beauty of the quadrangle. There were four thousand students on campus when Mr. Nevins attended - eleven thousand when I enrolled. It mattered not, we spoke the same language.

Mr. Nevins told us that daughter Annette will teach in the University Speech department this year while her husband completes work on his law degree. Quite a compliment to her.

"THANK YOU, THANK YOU," is all I can say for the many kind remarks made about the revival of this column. It makes us very proud, and most humble, to realize that these articles are considered worthwhile by some of you. So, thank you very much for calling to tell us, and to those who took the time to write notes, we would say that these letters will be cherished in the trusty metal box that holds the silver baby brush dotted by two generations of teaching, and the blue silk tie that husband Bob wore when he was not husband, but the gayest blade who cut the widest swath at the fraternity house. Thank you for your kindness, now and always.

working at Dorsey, is playing professional football with the Wiregrass Colts and really enjoying himself. Elba football fans will remember that Robert maintained a creditable record in that sport during high school. Playing defensive guard with this newly reorganized pro team, Robert is broadening his horizons.

A picture of Robert in uniform is printed in this issue of "The Clipper" and we learned that the Saturday after this issue goes to print the Colts will meet the Atlanta Rebels in Dothan. We should be interesting.

We asked Robbie about her sister Ann Ryatt and learned that she is enjoying her stay in Germany even though the conditions are unusual.

Ann and Oscar live in a converted home in a small village where they are one of the two English speaking couples. All the natives, of course, speak German and Ann is finding it difficult but interesting.

Oscar and the Mayor of the hamlet are teaching each other to speak the other's language, so maybe things will soon be better. Ann reports that the countryside is beautiful and the view from the yard, to be in the company of neighbors - these are the things we can take with us if difficult but interesting.

stationed, and also appreciated the opportunity to see Mrs. William Plant, and Mrs. Perle Kowles.

As we said our "goodbyes," bride Joyce told us that she and Billy would make their home in North Dakota until Christmas time when they will drive to Alabama for a quick visit in route to California. We shall expect them to "come a calling" during the holidays.

RAMBLING ROSES AND FLYING BRICKS

BY EARL TUCKER THOMASVILLE, ALABAMA

One morning last week I came down town wearing a pair of pants with a noticeable split in the seat. I had dressed hurriedly, without observing the tear, and I was highly embarrassed when several of my friends had some unkind and uncomplimentary things to say about the incident. One of my friends said I didn't have enough money to wear pants like that.

Later I got to thinking about what he said and the fellow was right. For instance, a millionaire can wear ripped trousers and torn shirts and people will sort of laugh and say just to look at that fellow you wouldn't think he was a millionaire and everybody who saw you sure wouldn't and I got to wondering how many strangers who saw me wearing the torn trousers figured maybe I was an eccentric millionaire but none of the people who knew me said anything about me being so rich and what they thought was that I had just about run out of breath.

The trouble with our capitalistic system is that millionaires don't act like millionaires. I reckon I must know a dozen or so men who have accumulated enough money to get in that class. That many don't know me, which doesn't matter, but I see 'em driving in their nice little compact cars and pick-up trucks, wearing work clothes, which is how they made their millions, and they look pretty sloppy and give-out and worried and I feel powerfully sorry for them and then I see their wives driving by in big black Cadillacs with 400 horsepower engines and one Chihuahua, and they are all dressed up in expensive clothing with a new hairdo and they ain't worried about nothing. The Chihuahuas (USA-Ret.) former President of the U.S. Army Aviation Board, and now a member of the Beechcraft organization, smiles his approval of the gift. The L-23 joins other illustrious and historic Army aircraft on display at the center.

Another thing, if a fellow is worried about whether his stocks are going up, he can't concentrate on his fishing cork going down.

get to thinking about how I could invest the money in some good stocks and bonds and make another million in it. I reckon maybe I should sell along with the first million and then I might feel around with unwise investments and lose the first million and wind up jumping out of a ten-story building, splitting my head open against the sidewalk, and also splitting a bigger hole in my breeches and I just would not want curiosity seekers gathering around and looking at the split in my trousers and saying just to look at that fellow you wouldn't have thought he was a millionaire and everybody saying you sure wouldn't.

Another thing, if a fellow is worried about whether his stocks are going up, he can't concentrate on his fishing cork going down.
